"You got jobs by word of mouth. A friend of mine worked at Addis and had a word with the supervisor. I was told to go in and start the following day. There was no formal interview."

Addis: "My very first job was packing pink and blue baby toothbrushes into tiny little cartons and for the first few days it seemed the hardest job in the world, especially as you had to do so many in an hour."

School leaver: "Jobs were easy to come by then, one merely left school, went to the labour exchange and were given an interview."

"I started working at HMP in July 1972 at the tender age of 15 years old. School leavers had a tour of the factory and although I opted to have the abattoir included in my tour when it came down to it I couldn't watch the slaughter! I remember thinking this place stinks, how on earth am I ever going to be able to work here but it was the highest paid job in Haverhill for a person with my ability. My first job was on the sausage line and I remember dreaming of the sausages running back up the belt to escape being wrapped. My starting pay was £11.50 per week. I paid my mum £5 board and loved coming home with a bunch of flowers for her paid for with my hard earned cash."

As a young girl your working life may be 50 years, but it is more likely to be between 5 and 10 initially. What are you going to take into domestic life from the years you spend working? If you can use a sewing machine speedily and accurately, you have a skill which will either save you money or earn money, or which will be of immediate use if you wish to return to a working life.

Was the advert above correct? Was being able to use a sewing machine useful?

"I have an industrial machine at home. I used to make shift dresses and children's clothes."
